Introduction

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

- Action for visitation of minor child: “Every application or verified petition in an action for visitation of a minor child, other than actions for dissolution of marriage or civil union, legal separation or annulment, shall state the name and date of birth of such minor child or children, the names of the parents and legal guardian of such minor child or children, and the facts necessary to give the court jurisdiction. An application brought under this section shall comply with Section 25-5. Any application or verified petition brought under this Section shall be commenced by an order to show cause. Upon presentation of the application or verified petition and an affidavit concerning children, the judicial authority shall cause an order to be issued requiring the adverse party or parties to appear on a day certain and show cause, if any there be, why the relief requested in the application or verified petition should not be granted. The application or verified petition, order and affidavit shall be served on the adverse party not less than twelve days before the date of the hearing, which shall not be held more than thirty days from the filing of the application or verified petition.” Conn. Practice Book § 25-4 (2021).
- Motions: “(a) Any appropriate party may move for alimony, child support, custody, visitation, appointment or removal of counsel for the minor child, appointment or removal of a guardian ad litem for the minor child, counsel fees, or for an order with respect to the maintenance of the family or for any other equitable relief. (b) Each such motion shall state clearly, in the caption of the motion, whether it is a pendente lite or a postjudgment motion.” Conn. Practice Book § 25-24 (2021).
- U.S. Supreme Court: “The liberty interest at issue in this case — the interest of parents in the care, custody, and control of their children — is perhaps the oldest of the fundamental liberty interests recognized by this Court. More than 75 years ago, in Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 US 390, 399, 401, 67 L Ed 1042, 43 S Ct 625 (1923), we held that the ‘liberty’ protected by the Due Process Clause includes the right of parents to ‘establish a home and bring up children’ and ‘to control the education of their own.’” Troxel v. Granville, 530 U.S. 57, 65, 120 S. Ct. 2054, 147 L. Ed. 2d 49 (2000).
- “Accordingly, any third party, including a grandparent or a great-grandparent, seeking visitation must allege and establish a parent-like relationship as a jurisdictional threshold in order both to pass constitutional muster and to be consistent with the legislative intent.” Roth v. Weston, 259 Conn. 202, 222, 789 A.2d 431 (2002).

The petition must also contain specific, good faith allegations that denial of the visitation will cause real and significant [emotional] harm to the child. As we have stated, that degree of harm requires more than a determination that visitation would be in the child's best interest. It must be a degree of harm analogous to the kind of harm contemplated by §§ 46b-120 and 46b-129, namely, that the child is 'neglected, uncared-for or dependent.' The degree of specificity of the allegations must be sufficient to justify requiring the fit parent to subject his or her parental judgment to unwanted litigation. Only if these specific, good faith allegations are made will a court have jurisdiction over the petition."

Although the defendant has asserted that she did not intend for the plaintiff to obtain any rights with regard to the child by her acknowledgment under oath that belief does not affect the legal import of her having signed it. Undoing such an acknowledgment, after the sixty-day period has passed may only be done at the discretion of the Court and based upon a DNA test that the respondent is not possibly the biological father of the child. That is not the case here.

Based on the circumstances surrounding the decision by the defendant to be artificially inseminated by the sperm of the plaintiff, the preconception intent of the parties, the evidence submitted, and, in particular, the plaintiff's acknowledgment of paternity, it is the court's determination that he has standing to bring an application for joint legal custody and visitation of the child. The defendant's motion to dismiss is denied."

- Raffino v. Bottass, Superior Court, Judicial District of Hartford, No. FA05-4019188-S (April 11, 2006) (41 Conn. L. Rptr. 181, 183) (2006 WL 1149131). "This court recognizes the anguish that the grandparents are suffering in not being able to spend as much time with their grandchildren as they previously did and their concern that the children will suffer too. However, the court also recognizes that the father must devote his energies to re-establishing his family unit with the children, and, as the courts have indicated, there is a presumption that he is acting in the best interests of the children. It is that very principle that is so protected that the Connecticut Supreme Court has declared that a very high standard must be met so as to appropriately protect the father's right to not have to defend his decisions in a court of law. While adherence to the underlying principle may be very difficult for the grandparents at this time, the grandparents might consider that just as parents must give their children two things — roots and wings, grandparents must continue to do that for the parents of their grandchildren."
- Foster v. Foster, 84 Conn. App. 311, 320, 853 A.2d 588 (2004). "As the plaintiff has no constitutionally protected right to counsel in a custody or visitation proceeding, we decline to require the court, in every custody or visitation dispute confronted with a pro se litigant, to grant a continuance simply because the request is founded on a parent's right to raise a child without undue interference. Although we recognize the value of family integrity, we acknowledge also that the state has an interest in the orderly presentation of cases and the ability of the court to manage its docket. We therefore conclude that, balancing all the interests, the court's refusal to grant a continuance did not result in a constitutional deprivation."
- Roth v. Weston, 259 Conn. 202, 789 A.2d 431 (2002). "In the absence of a threshold requirement of a finding of real and substantial harm to the child as a result of the denial of visitation, forced intervention by a third party seeking visitation is an unwarranted intrusion into family autonomy. Accordingly, in the absence of any such requirement of harm, § 46b-59 does not justify interference with parental rights." (p. 229)

"... the petition must contain specific, good faith allegations that the petitioner has a relationship with the child that is similar in nature to a parent-child relationship. The petition must also contain specific, good faith allegations that the denial of the visitation will cause real and significant harm to the child... Second, the petitioner must prove these allegations by clear and convincing evidence." (pp. 234-235)

- Laspina-Williams v. Laspina-Williams, 46 Conn. Supp. 165, 742 A.2d 840 (1999). Petition for visitation rights with minor child, conceived through alternative insemination, who had been jointly raised by coguardian same sex partners; "On July 27, 1999, the plaintiff . . . filed the present action seeking visitation with the biological daughter of the defendant . . . pursuant to General Statutes § 46b-59." (p. 166)

"The defendant filed a motion to dismiss the present action on August 23, 1999, on the following two grounds: (1) that this court lacks subject matter jurisdiction because the plaintiff does not meet the threshold requirements of Castagno v. Wholean, 239 Conn. 336, 684 A.2d 1181 (1996); and (2) the action should be dismissed in accordance with the principles of judicial economy, efficiency, and to give effect to § 45a-616 (d). . . . The plaintiff timely filed a memorandum in opposition to the motion to dismiss arguing that the breakdown of the parties' relationship creates the threshold requirement of 'disruption of the family unit' as required by Castagno, and that the removal of the guardianship action pending in the Probate Court is separate and distinct from the present visitation action." (p. 167)

The sole issue on appeal in Castagno v. Wholean, supra, 239 Conn. 337, was 'whether, pursuant to . . . § 46b-59, the trial court had subject matter jurisdiction to entertain a petition by grandparents for visitation rights with their minor grandchildren when the grandchildren and their parents were not involved in any case or controversy currently before the court and there was no claim that the family unit was no longer intact.' The defendant argues that because the plaintiff has no biological tie to the child, the plaintiff cannot be and never was a parent to the minor child under Connecticut law and thus the plaintiff fails to meet the requirement that the 'parents were not involved in any case or controversy currently before the court.' (Emphasis added.) Id. The defendant further contends that although the parties were accepted by friends and others to be a family, because

Connecticut law would not recognize the parties and the minor child as 'family' there can be no claim that the 'family unit was no longer intact.'

The court finds the foregoing arguments of the defendant unpersuasive. Under § 46b-59 'any person' may seek visitation of a minor child as opposed to only persons with a biological tie to the child." (p. 168 -169)

"Section 46b-59 does not define the relationship necessary to give standing. Without addressing or labeling the status of the relationship of the parties, the defendant allowed, even encouraged, the plaintiff to assume a significant role in the life of the child such that she is a party entitled to seek visitation with the child. Accordingly, the defendant's motion to dismiss on this ground is denied." (p. 171)

"The defendant next argues that the case should be dismissed because the plaintiff can seek visitation in the Probate Court under § 45a-616. . . . Neither this subsection nor any other section or subsection of the statute exclusively vests in either the Probate or Superior Courts jurisdiction over a petition for visitation." (pp. 171-172)

- Raymond v. Raymond, 165 Conn. 735, 742, 345 A.2d 48 (1974). "It has never been our law that support payments were conditioned on the ability to exercise rights of visitation or vice versa. The duty to support is wholly independent of the right of visitation."

Section 2: Third Party Visitation Actions

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE:

Bibliographic resources relating to right of nonparents to initiate child visitation actions or to seek visitation by intervening in a pending family action.

DEFINITIONS:

- Constitutional Issues: "The relevant statutes concerning visitation and custody are overly broad in exactly the same fashion; they fail to define with particularity those persons who may seek visitation and custody other than parents. For this reason, as in the case of visitation, a literal application of the custody statutes could place them in 'constitutional jeopardy.'" Castagno v. Wholean, supra, 239 Conn. 345. Accordingly, we conclude that, to avoid constitutional infirmity, the standing requirement that a third party allege a parent-like relationship with the child should be applied for all of the reasons described in Roth [Roth v. Weston, 259 Conn. 202 (2002)] to third party custody awards and to third parties seeking intervention in existing custody proceedings." Fish v. Fish, 285 Conn. 24, 44, 939 A. 2d 1040 (2008).
- Third Party: "is not defined in the foregoing statutes or in any other related statutes. The legislative history of the statutes sheds no additional light on the matter. As we stated in Castagno, [Castagno v. Wholean, 239 Conn. 336, 684 A.2d 1181(1996)] 'courts are bound to assume that the legislature intended, in enacting a particular law, to achieve its purpose in a manner which is both effective and constitutional. . . . [T]his presumption of constitutionality imposes upon the trial court, as well as this court, the duty to construe statutes, whenever possible, in a manner that comports with constitutional safeguards of liberty'." Fish v. Fish, 285 Conn. 24, 42-43, 939 A. 2d 1040 (2008).
- Petition for visitation: "First, the petition must contain specific, good faith allegations that the petitioner has a relationship with the child that is similar in nature to a parent-child relationship. The petition must also contain specific, good faith allegations that denial of the visitation will cause real and significant harm to the child. As we have stated, that degree of harm requires more than a determination that visitation would be in the child's best interest. It must be a degree of harm analogous to the kind of harm contemplated by §§ 46b-120 and 46b-129, namely, that the child is 'neglected, uncared-for or dependent.' The degree of specificity of the allegations must be sufficient to justify requiring the fit parent to subject his or her parental judgment to unwanted litigation.

Only if these specific, good faith allegations are made will a court have jurisdiction over the petition.

Second, once these high jurisdictional hurdles have been overcome, the petitioner must prove these allegations by clear and convincing evidence. Only if that enhanced burden of persuasion has been met may the court enter an order of visitation. These requirements thus serve as the constitutionally mandated safeguards against unwarranted intrusions into a parent's authority." Roth v. Weston, 259 Conn. 202, 234-235, 789 A.2d 431 (2002).

- Parent-like relationship: "(c) In determining whether a parent-like relationship exists between the person and the minor child, the Superior Court may consider, but shall not be limited to, the following factors:
 - (1) The existence and length of a relationship between the person and the minor child prior to the submission of a petition pursuant to this section;
 - (2) The length of time that the relationship between the person and the minor child has been disrupted;
 - (3) The specific parent-like activities of the person seeking visitation toward the minor child;
 - (4) Any evidence that the person seeking visitation has unreasonably undermined the authority and discretion of the custodial parent;
 - (5) The significant absence of a parent from the life of a minor child;
 - (6) The death of one of the minor child's parents;
 - (7) The physical separation of the parents of the minor child;
 - (8) The fitness of the person seeking visitation; and
 - (9) The fitness of the custodial parent.(d) In determining whether a parent-like relationship exists between a grandparent seeking visitation pursuant to this section and a minor child, the Superior Court may consider, in addition to the factors enumerated in subsection (c) of this section, the history of regular contact and proof of a close and substantial relationship between the grandparent and the minor child." Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-59 (2021).
- Harm: "The harm alleged in a visitation petition results from the child's lack of access to the petitioner rather than from the parent-child relationship, which is deemed to be beneficial." Fish v. Fish, 285 Conn. 24, 47, 939 A. 2d 1040 (2008).
- Custody vs. visitation: "In summary, we conclude that third party custody petitions challenge the liberty interest of a parent in a way that is fundamentally different from visitation petitions . . . in which the child's relationship with the parent has not been placed in issue.” Fish v. Fish, 285 Conn. 24, 55-56, 939 A. 2d 1040 (2008).

- Igersheim v. Bezruczyk, 197 Conn. App. 412, 231 A.3d 1276 (2020). “The statutory jurisdictional requirements relevant to the present case are prescribed in General Statutes § 46b-59, the third-party visitation statute. Section 46b-59 (b) provides: ‘Any person may submit a verified petition to the Superior Court for the right of visitation with any minor child. Such petition shall include specific and good-faith allegations that (1) a parent-like relationship exists between the person and the minor child, and (2) denial of visitation would cause real and significant harm. Subject to subsection (e) of this section, the court shall grant the right of visitation with any minor child to any person if the court finds after hearing and by clear and convincing evidence that a parent-like relationship exists between the person and the minor child and denial of visitation would cause real and significant harm.’ (pp. 416-417)

“On the petition form, the plaintiff, inter alia, checked the boxes next to the statements: ‘I have a relationship with the child(ren) that is parent-like . . . (State specifically how your relationship is parent-like)’ and ‘Denial of visitation will cause

real and significant harm to the child(ren) . . . (State specifically what harm would be caused to the child(ren) by a denial of visitation)’ As to the parent-like relationship, the plaintiff wrote: ‘[B]een [taking] care of [the minor child] up until this past April when he moved back with his mom.’ As to the harm, the plaintiff wrote: ‘Jeopardize relationship with grandparents.’ (p. 414)

“Exercising plenary review of the issue, we conclude that the initial, verified petition did not contain the required specific, good faith allegations of real and significant harm. Section 46b-59 (a) (2) defines “[r]eal and significant harm” to mean ‘that the minor child is neglected, as defined in section 46b-120, or uncared for, as defined in said section.’ Other than a general statement that denial of visitation would ‘[j]eopardize [a] relationship with [his] grandparents,’ the plaintiff’s verified petition contained no specific references to harm, much less specific allegations of harm that the minor child would endure if visitation were denied. See Fuller v. Baldino, 176 Conn. App. 451, 460, 168 A.3d 665 (2017). The petition, then, lacked the specific allegations necessary to meet the jurisdictional thresholds of § 46b-59 (b). Consequently, we conclude that the trial court did not have subject matter jurisdiction over the plaintiff’s petition for visitation.” (pp. 420-421)

- Romeo v. Bazow, 195 Conn. App. 378, 225 A.3d 710 (2020). “In the present case, the plaintiffs argue that the court improperly declined to consider their expert disclosure when ruling on the defendant’s motion to dismiss their petition. They maintain that the disclosure was part of the record available to the court when considering whether the Roth standards were satisfied and that the disclosure specifically ‘address[ed] the harm issue in addition to their affidavit.’ As noted previously, it is not clear from our scrutiny of the record that the plaintiffs requested that Judge Murphy consider the expert disclosure because, prior to oral argument before Judge Murphy, Judge Olear had stated, as represented by the defendant’s counsel, that no ‘third parties’ could present testimony. Even if the plaintiffs had made such a request, we conclude that the court properly limited its consideration to the allegations contained in the plaintiffs’ petition, including the attached affidavit.” (pp. 387-388)

“Indeed, our case law instructs that it would have been inappropriate for the court to look beyond that pleading to the expert disclosure.” (p. 389)

- Hunter v. Shrestha, 195 Conn. App. 393, 401-402, 225 A.3d 285 (2020). “We first address the allegation that denial of visitation would cut the child off from her maternal side of the family. Although it may not be in the child’s best interest not to share a relationship with extended family, this allegation is not commensurate with the level of harm contemplated in Roth. Second, the plaintiffs allege that denying visitation will have the effect of the child feeling that they have abandoned her, citing the early abandonment by the child's mother. Again, while the absence of a parent and maternal family members could be detrimental to the child, it does not rise to the level of harm set forth in § 46b-120. . . . Finally, the plaintiffs' allegation that denying visitation will 'compound [the child's] early childhood trauma [and] harm her' ignores the requirement that facts must be pleaded with sufficient specificity to warrant the court's intrusion. The plaintiffs do not allege how the child will be harmed and, without more, these allegations do not rise to the level of abuse, neglect, or abandonment contemplated by Roth."

- Boisvert v. Gavis, 332 Conn. 115, 210 A3d 1 (2019). "The principal issue in this appeal is whether an order granting a third party's petition for visitation pursuant to General Statutes § 46b-59 over the objection of a fit custodial parent must include a provision requiring the third party to abide by all of the parent's decisions regarding the care of the child during the visitation. We conclude that neither § 46b-59 nor the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment to the United States constitution requires the trial court to impose such a broad term and condition on an order of third-party visitation." (pp. 119-120)

"The trial court noted that 'visitation is always an open issue, it's never cast in stone,' and, if an order of visitation puts a child at risk or is not in a child's best interest, 'then the court can always modify or terminate the visitation' The trial court explained, however, that it was not otherwise 'going to micromanage' the visitation because '[there are] literally millions and millions of circumstances that may ultimately follow'" (p. 126)

"Stated another way, once there has been a judicial determination that a parent's denial of visitation would cause the child to suffer real and significant harm, then it no longer can be presumed that a fit parent is acting in his or her child's best interest in connection with the third-party visitation. The Roth standard itself is built on the premise that judicial intervention is warranted precisely because the interactions between an otherwise fit parent and a third party seeking visitation can be so fraught with hostility, tension, and resentment—often for reasons unrelated to the child—that the parent is unable or unwilling to act in the child's best interest, resulting in real and significant harm to the child.

None of this means that a fit parent who is subject to a third-party visitation order has forfeited his or her parental rights or that the third party has obtained parental rights by virtue of the order of visitation. A fit parent retains the 'quintessential rights of parenthood,' which 'include the right to make medical, educational, religious and other decisions that affect the most fundamental aspects of the child's life' (Internal quotation marks omitted.) Fish v. Fish, 285 Conn.

24, 58, 939 A.2d 1040 (2008). Likewise, § 46b-59 (f) explicitly provides that '[v]isitation rights granted in accordance with this section shall not be deemed to have created parental rights in the person or persons to whom such visitation rights are granted' These precepts remain fixed and unchanged, but they do not confer on the parent an absolute right to dictate the terms and conditions governing the visitation. The animating purpose of the statute is to sustain and nurture the deep, emotional bond between the child and the third party, and the third party's caregiving choices for the child while acting in a 'parent-like' capacity necessarily are integral to the formation and sustenance of that bond—a bond that the trial court has determined must be preserved to prevent real and significant harm to the child. The fundamental purpose of the statute would be thwarted if the parent opposing third-party visitation were given unfettered authority to micromanage the visitation and to replace the third party's caregiving choices during the period of visitation with his or her own" (pp. 145-146)

"Nothing in § 46b-59 requires the trial court to include, as a term and condition governing the order of third-party visitation, a provision affirmatively directing the third party not to override a fit parent's decisions regarding the child's care." (pp. 142-143)

"A party seeking to impose terms and conditions on the order of visitation must make a specific and timely request. A request is specific if it is tailored to identify and ameliorate the party's concern and is accompanied by an explanation of how the requested terms and conditions further the best interest of the child. . . . If the requesting party is a parent who believes that the requested terms and conditions are necessary to protect his or her fundamental parental rights, the parent must alert the trial court to the alleged constitutional nature of the request and the right asserted. See General Statutes § 46b-59 (f) ('[t]he grant of such visitation rights shall not prevent any court of competent jurisdiction from thereafter acting upon . . . the parental rights with respect to such child'). The explanation provided to the trial court need not be exhaustive, but it should be sufficient to alert the trial court to the content and contours of the requesting party's claim." (p. 150)

"The requesting party is not barred from belatedly requesting such terms and conditions in a postjudgment motion, as was done in this case, but the belated nature of the request may support an inference that it is not made in good faith, if the inference reasonably is justified under the surrounding circumstances." (p. 151)

"Ultimately it is up to the trial court, as the finder of fact and the arbiter of credibility, to determine the issues relating to the terms and conditions of visitation, including, without limitation, whether the requested terms and conditions reflect a parent's sincerely held belief regarding a fundamental aspect of the child's upbringing or whether they are a pretext to undermine the third-party relationship or the order of visitation. The trial court has many "tools in its arsenal" to protect a fit parent's fundamental rights while simultaneously fostering the third-party relationship by effectuating the order of visitation." (p. 152)

"As the United States Supreme Court has cautioned, "the constitutional protections in this area are best 'elaborated with care,' " because "[state court] adjudication in this context occurs on a case-by-case basis" Troxel v. Granville, supra, 530 U.S. 73 (plurality opinion). The assessment of what terms and conditions are necessary in the third-party visitation context is highly fact dependent; see DiGiovanna v. St. George, supra, 300 Conn. 78; and cannot be undertaken "in a factual vacuum.'" (pp. 152-153)

- Romeo v. Bazow, Superior Court, Judicial District of Hartford at Hartford, No. HHD FA18-6087099-S (Oct. 5, 2018) (67 Conn. L. Rptr. 153) (2018 WL 5116489), judgment affirmed at 195 Conn. App. 378, 225 A.3d 710 (2020). "The plaintiffs' petition states that the plaintiffs disagree with some of the defendant's parenting decisions. The plaintiffs' petition does not allege, however, that the children's mother is unfit or that her children are neglected. Clearly, the plaintiffs themselves are hurt that they no longer have contact with their grandchildren. The grandchildren may miss regular contact with their grandparents, although this fact is not alleged. But even if, for arguments sake, the grandchildren miss their grandparents or the defendant has made parenting mistakes, this type of harm alone does not rise to the level of neglect or uncared for as contemplated by Roth or as defined in General Statute §46b-59. The court does not question the intentions of the plaintiffs. The court decides only whether the plaintiffs have met the constitutionally mandated requirements for standing in their petition. For the reasons stated above, the court concludes that the plaintiffs lack standing. The motion to dismiss is granted."
- Warner v. Bicknell, 126 Conn. App. 588, 593, 12 A.3d 1042 (2011). "Our case law is clear that, absent the allegations identified by the Roth court, the court must dismiss a third party's application for visitation. Id., 240; see also Denardo v. Bergamo, 272 Conn. 500, 514, 863 A.2d 686 (2005); Crockett v. Pastore, 259 Conn. 240, 250, 789 A.2d 453 (2002); Fennelly v. Norton, 103 Conn. App. 125, 142, 931 A.2d 269 ('[i]f the application [for visitation] does not contain such allegations, the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction and the application must be dismissed'), cert. denied, 284 Conn. 918, 931 A.2d 936 (2007); Clements v. Jones, 71 Conn. App. 688, 696, 803 A.2d 378 (2002)."

- In re Andrew C., Superior Court, Judicial District of Hartford at Hartford, No. H12CP11013647A (April 19, 2011) (43 Conn. L. Rptr. 290) (2011 WL 1886493). "The paramount purpose of our termination of parental rights and adoption laws is the compelling interest in locating a stable and permanent home for a child in a timely fashion. This strong public policy should not be undermined by the forced imposition of visitation actions instituted by biological family members, or even worse, by persons with a tenuous nexus to the child. To hold that § 46b-59 is applicable to a child for whom the department is statutory parent will impermissibly qualify or impede many adoptions, effectively undermining them. The legislature did not intend that § 46b-59 create third-party visitation rights to children who have been freed for adoption. Absent agreement, such children and their new or prospective adoptive families must be free from such intrusions.

Accordingly, the department's motion to dismiss is granted. As the plaintiffs lack standing to file a petition under § 46b-59 to visit with a child for whom the department is statutory parent, this court lacks subject matter jurisdiction."

- DiGiovanna v. St George, 300 Conn. 59, 61, 12 A.3d 900 (2011). "In Roth v. Weston, 259 Conn. 202, 789 A.2d 431 (2002), this court held that the legislature could, consistent with due process, authorize a nonparent to obtain visitation with a minor child over a fit parent's objection if the nonparent alleges and proves by clear and convincing evidence that he or she has a parent-like relationship with the child and that the child would suffer harm akin to abuse and neglect if that relationship is not permitted to continue. The present case calls on this court to consider whether a trial court may deny a nonparent's application for visitation when the applicant has met this stringent burden of proof if that court concludes that visitation nonetheless is not in the best interest of the child . . . We conclude that the trial court improperly determined that the best interest of the child standard can overcome the Roth standard for ordering visitation."
- Fish v. Fish, 285 Conn. 24, 46, 939 A. 2d 1040 (2008). "Mindful of the parent's constitutional rights, we concluded in Roth that Connecticut's third party visitation statute, without a judicial gloss, was unconstitutional and interfered with the fundamental right of parents to raise and care for their children because it was too broadly written and provided no standard to guide the court in making a visitation decision, other than the best interests of the child."
- Denardo v. Bergamo, 272 Conn. 500, 514, 863 A.2d 686 (2005). Without those specific, good faith allegations or such proof, either at the time of the filing of their petition or at the time of the hearing on the defendant's motion, the trial court's prior order of visitation was rendered without subject matter jurisdiction. For the foregoing reasons, the defendant's motion to modify and eliminate the plaintiff's visitation rights is denied, without prejudice, and the plaintiff will be allowed an opportunity to amend her application and provide proof that it is consistent with all the requirements of Roth."

"The question presented by this motion is whether the standard articulated in Roth v. Weston, invalidates the prior orders in this case which have allowed for grandparent visitation... The court concludes that the decision of Roth v. Weston does override the prior court orders in this matter granting visitation rights to non-parent third parties against the wishes of a fit custodial parent."

Conn. Gen. Stat. (2021)

- § 46b-56. “(b) In making or modifying any order as provided in subsection (a) of this section, the rights and responsibilities of both parents shall be considered and the court shall enter orders accordingly that serve the best interests of the child and provide the child with the active and consistent involvement of both parents commensurate with their abilities and interests. Such orders may include, but shall not be limited to: (1) Approval of a parental responsibility plan agreed to by the parents pursuant to section 46b-56a; (2) the award of joint parental responsibility of a minor child to both parents, which shall include (A) provisions for residential arrangements with each parent in accordance with the needs of the child and the parents, and (B) provisions for consultation between the parents and for the making of major decisions regarding the child's health, education and religious upbringing; (3) the award of sole custody to one parent with appropriate parenting time for the noncustodial parent where sole custody is in the best interests of the child; or (4) any other custody arrangements as the court may determine to be in the best interests of the child.”
- § 46b-56. “(c) In making or modifying any order as provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the court shall consider the best interests of the child, and in doing so may consider, but shall not be limited to, one or more of the following factors: . . . (3) any relevant and material information obtained from the child, including the informed preferences of the child . . . ”

- Kennedy v. Kennedy, 83 Conn. App. 106, 110-111, 847 A.2d 1104 (2004). "The denial of the plaintiff's request for a continuance to retain an attorney for assistance on the motion of civil contempt raises different concerns. Practice Book § 25-63 provides a right to counsel in family civil contempt proceedings. We have held that a court's failure to advise a party of the right to counsel in a contempt proceeding in which he faces potential incarceration, and in the event he is indigent, to court-appointed counsel, is fatal to the finding of contempt and any order related thereto. See Emerick v. Emerick, 28 Conn. App. 794, 800, 613 A.2d 1351, cert. denied, 224 Conn. 915, 617 A.2d 171 (1992). - Wilson v. Wilson, 38 Conn. App. 263, 275-276, 661 A.2d 621 (1995). "We agree with the plaintiff that a court may not find a person in contempt without considering the circumstances surrounding the violation to determine whether such violation was wilful. See id., 124; Marcil v. Marcil, 4 Conn. App. 403, 405, 494 A.2d 620 (1985). Despite the plaintiff's claims to the contrary, our review of the transcripts of the proceedings in this case establish that the trial court gave thorough consideration to the circumstances surrounding the plaintiff's violation of the court's order of visitation."
- Tatro v. Tatro, 24 Conn. App. 180, 186, 587 A.2d 154 (1991). "The inability of a contemnor to obey a court order through no fault of her own is a defense to a claim of contempt... [T]he act for which the penalty was imposed cannot constitute contempt if the actor was unable to obey the order."

- Gilman v. Gilman, Superior Court, Judicial District of New Haven at New Haven, No. 385930 (May 14, 1997) (1997 WL 276459) (1997 Conn. Super. Lexis 1284). "...the court has serious concerns as to whether the plaintiff fully appreciates the importance of complying with the court's orders and the consequences for not doing so. It is fundamentally important that the children have visitation with their father according to the court's schedule. In order to insure that visitation occurs when scheduled, the court imposes a fine of $150 for every visitation missed, now and in the future, due to the plaintiff's willful actions. The court also finds that an award to the defendant of attorney fees in the amount of $750 for the prosecution of the motions for contempt is reasonable."

Section 6: Habeas Corpus Proceedings in Child Visitation Matters

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE:

Bibliographic resources relating to the applicability of a writ of habeas corpus in child visitation matters and form preparation and procedure in habeas corpus visitation proceedings.

DEFINITION:

- “The employment of the forms of habeas corpus in a child custody case is not for the purpose of testing the legality of a confinement or restraint as contemplated by the ancient common-law writ... The primary purpose is to furnish a means by which the court ... may determine what is best for the welfare of the child.” Howarth v. Northcott, 152 Conn. 460, 464, 208 A2d 540 (1965).
- “A habeas corpus petition concerning a minor child’s custody is an equitable proceeding in which the trial court is called upon to decide, in the best exercise of its sound discretion, the custodial placement which will be best for the child.” Evans v. Santoro, 6 Conn. App. 707, 709, 507 A.2d 116 (1986).

- In re Emma F., Superior Court, Judicial District of New Britain, No. H14CP14011313A (2015 WL 1759353) (March 17, 2015). “The earliest reported instance in Connecticut of the use of habeas corpus to obtain custody of a child is the case of Nickols v. Giles, 2 Root (Conn.) 461, 461–62 (1796), where the court denied such a petition brought by a father seeking to remove a three-year-old daughter from her mother because, the court held, said Nichols had ‘no house and very little property,’ was ‘very irregular in his temper and life,’ and the child ‘is well taken care of in her mother’s care’ and ‘not likely to be so by the father.’ As that case shows, ‘[t]he primary purpose of habeas corpus in matters relating to the custody of children is to furnish a means by which the Superior Court may determine what is best for the welfare of the child.’ Doe v. Doe, 163 Conn. 340, 342, 307 A.2d 166 (1972). Thus the father’s petition for a writ here, even if he proved the alleged constitutional violations, would ultimately depend on the precise issue pending in the child protection cases of what visitation and custody orders are in these children’s best interests.”
- In Re Jonathan M., 255 Conn. 208, 764 A.2d 739 (2001). “The primary issue in this appeal is whether the habeas petition may be employed as a means of testing the merits of the termination judgment, and not solely as a means of bringing challenges to custody and visitation orders. Although the petitioner’s parental rights have been terminated by a presumptively valid judgment ... to foreclose, on jurisdictional grounds, his ability to seek custody and assert subsequent challenges to the termination judgment, whether through a petition for a writ of habeas corpus or other means, would require a circular course of reasoning in which we are unprepared to indulge.” p. 223
“Indeed, permitting a habeas writ as a vehicle in which a parent whose rights have been terminated may attack that judgment collaterally, unbounded by constraints within which time such a petition may be filed, would further undermine the legislative pronouncements in this area of the law.” pp. 240-241

"Moreover, even in habeas actions properly brought to challenge custody, this court has recited consistently that 'the welfare of the child is the paramount consideration . . . ' (Internal quotation marks omitted.) McGaffin v. Roberts, 193 Conn. 393, 403, 479 A.2d 176 (1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1050, 105 S. Ct. 1747, 84 L. Ed. 2d 813 (1985). As such, we are unwilling to infect the delicate and serious process governing the placement of foster children in permanent adoptive homes with perpetual uncertainty where the General Assembly has not directed us to do so." p. 241

- Weidenbacher v. Duclos, 234 Conn. 51, 73, 661 A.2d 988 (1995). "...we hold that the mere fact that a child was born while the mother was married is not a per se bar that prevents a man other than her husband from establishing standing to bring an action for a writ of habeas corpus for custody of or visitation with a minor child."
- Doe v. Doe, 163 Conn. 340, 345, 307 A.2d 166 (1972). The court held that only parents and legal guardians have standing to bring an action for habeas corpus seeking visitation rights. "Because there was no allegation that the plaintiff was the parent or guardian of Beverly, there is no error in the judgment of the trial court in granting the motion to quash the petition insofar as it related to her."
- Evans v. Santoro, 6 Conn. App. 707, 709-710, 507 A.2d 116 (1986). "In order to invoke the aid of a habeas corpus writ to enforce a right to physical custody of a minor, the applicant for the writ must show a prima facie legal right to custody... Once the writ has issued, the burden of proving that a change of custody would be in the child's best interest rests upon the party seeking the change... In this case, that party was the petitioner."
- Axelrod v. Avery, Superior Court, Judicial District of New London at New London, No. 532395 (Nov. 29, 1994) (13 Conn. L. Rptr. 124) (1994 Conn. Super. Lexis 3058). "The language of Nye arguably extends standing in habeas corpus petitions from the narrow construction in Doe to a broad construction which include members of a child's biological family... Moreover, a finding of standing is appropriate on the facts ... because the plaintiffs have a sufficient 'personal stake in the outcome of the controversy,' namely the custody of their granddaughter and the maintenance of a familial relationship with her."
- Forestiere v. Doyle, 30 Conn. Supp. 284, 288, 31 A. 2d 607 (1973). Plaintiff father's petition for a writ of habeas corpus seeking visitation rights* "... to deny him visitation rights without a hearing on the ultimate question of what is best for the welfare of the child is to deny him his constitutional rights."
